G. Eugene “Gene” Boyce is an accomplished attorney who currently serves as Senior Counsel at Nexsen Pruet, focusing primarily in the areas of class action law, litigation, commercial litigation and constitutional law. Throughout his career, Boyce has participated as defendant and plaintiff attorney in countless jury trials and more than 142 appellate proceedings in state and federal courts, including the U.S. Supreme Court. He has also examined the conduct of public officials at the highest federal and state levels.

One of Boyce’s signature achievements includes serving as assistant chief counsel to the Watergate Committee, working alongside Senator Sam J. Ervin. Boyce served as the lead investigator in the discovery of President Nixon’s White House taping system. He also worked as counsel to the U.S. Senate Ethics Committee, and vetted numerous applicants for federal judicial appointments as special counsel to the Senate Judiciary Committee and advisor to its chairman, Senator Robert Morgan.

A native North Carolinian, Mr. Boyce and his wife have been married since 1954. They have three children and seven grandchildren.
