IN MEMORY OF

Beverly Wheeler Massey
Assistant Dean and Associate Professor of Law

Dean Massey, 34, received her B.S. degree magna cum laude and her law degree cum laude from Campbell University. She graduated first in her law school class. Her accomplishments as a student were many. She was elected to Omicron Delta Kappa and Phi Kappa Phi and was a charter editor of The Campbell Law Review. At her graduation from law school, Massey received a special award of distinction "for her extraordinary contributions as a student, scholar, teaching assistant and administrator."

After graduation she served as a research assistant to Judge Robert M. Martin of the North Carolina Court of Appeals. In 1981, a delegation from Campbell visited her and convinced her to return to Campbell as a law professor. She served in that position specializing in family law and in 1987 was promoted to Assistant Dean of the Law School.

Her promotion gave her many new responsibilities, yet she continued in her academic position as a law professor. She took her job very seriously and worked long hours improving the placement office and maintaining contact with nearly 1000 alumni. If it were not for the efforts of Dean Massey, The Campbell Lawyer itself would not exist. The idea of an alumni newsletter was hers. She developed the "Lawyer" into what it is today and served as its editor until her death.

Dean Massey was truly a great teacher, law school administrator, and legal scholar. But she was something else, she was a great person, a "dynamo" with an endless supply of energy and enthusiasm. Although she was a very busy person, she

Assistant Dean Beverly W. Massey

On January 18, 1990, we suffered a great loss. The death of Beverly Wheeler Massey, Assistant Dean and Professor of Law, was a shock to us all.

Many of you who receive this newsletter knew Dean Massey personally, or had dealings with her as Director of Placement and Alumni Relations. Her untimely death has saddened us all. This special edition of the Campbell Lawyer is dedicated to her memory so that we can look back on her life and remember her as the joyful, hardworking person that she was.

The Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law Alumni Newsletter
always had time for her children. Every morning she drove them to school and in the afternoon her daughter, Lara, would stop by the office to tell her mother of the day's activities.

Dean Massey is survived by her children, Lara Bell and Benjamin James of Buies Creek; parents, James C. and Eleanor Wheeler of Zebulon; brother, J. Carlos Wheeler Jr. of Zebulon; sister, Karen Wheeler Home of Wendell; and the children's father, Ben F. Massey Jr. of Buies Creek.

The funeral service in Zebulon and the memorial service in Buies Creek Baptist Church were both filled to capacity with those who wished to pay their final respects. Many students participated in the memorial service in which Law School Dean Patrick Hetrick announced that Massey's daughter, Lara, had contributed her savings to establish a scholarship fund in her mother's name.

The Women in Law organization has renamed a scholarship after Massey, who helped start the fund. Dean Hetrick has announced that the Law Placement Center in the proposed law school addition, which Dean Massey also helped establish, will be named in her memory.

Contributions can be made to either the Beverly Massey Memorial Fund, the Beverly Wheeler Massey Women-in-Law Scholarship Fund or to the current Law School Building Fund. Tremendous support has already been shown by many alumni and friends. — Ashley Williamson

On The Death of a Colleague

1990 F. Leary Davis

Beverly Wheeler Massey was more than a colleague. She was a friend, but a friend who had first been something like a daughter, and then something like a sister, and now was all of those things. She was a young law teacher, mother, and administrator of immense talent and potential who enriched the lives of all who knew her. Her friends were proud of their relationships with her; most proud and gratified were those of us who sensed that in some way we had helped advance her life and career.

Then she took her own promising and, we thought, rewarding, life.

None of her colleagues, I suspected, felt more involved in, close to, or responsible for Beverly's professional life than I. While we knew she was displeased that her marriage to Ben had ended in divorce, we considered them admirable parents and thought she had adjusted to her new status. Beverly was devoted to her family. As might have been expected of a sensitive and modern teacher of family law, she and Ben shared joint custody of their children. They maintained separate homes in the same community, and a full-time maid/baby sitter worked each day in whichever home the children were staying. To us, her work, her parenthood, and her personal relationships continued to be commendable and self-affirming.

Her suicide caught us, and her family, completely by surprise. In turn denial, anger and guilt textured the fabric of our grief. And at a time when I was incorporating into a required first-year course materials relevant to her life and death, I felt even more guilt that I had not discussed with her what I was doing. I reflect now on her life in the law and on what we might make of her death.

I first learned of Beverly when I returned to my home town, Zebulon, North Carolina, to practice law with my father in 1967. I began teaching a Sunday School class of seventh grade boys, and they would occasionally talk about seventh grade girls, of whom Beverly was one. She was precocious, academically and otherwise. I remember stepping out of our office the following year to watch the Christmas parade and being surprised to see Beverly, then in only the eighth grade, serving as head majorette for the high school's marching band.

When Beverly decided she wanted a part-time job after school, at about the age my daughter is now, a teenager but not yet old enough to drive, it was she and not her father who asked if she might work at our law firm. It was immediately evident that we had employed an exceptionally talented young lady, and one who in her rearing and predispositions had developed a natural professionalism toward which many practicing lawyers should aspire. It was evident that whatever she chose to do with her life she would do well. When she came into my office near the end of her sophomore year of college and asked what I thought of her pursuing a paralegal career, I naturally asked why she didn't consider a career as a lawyer instead. She excelled in her pre-law work at UNC-CH that fall, exceeding even her accomplishments in the general curriculum at St. Mary's over the preceding two years, and chose law as her career.

She and Ben had married that summer. Our sons Trey and Ben, then 6 and 3, were their ringbearers. A few months later an event occurred which transformed my life, and ultimately Beverly's, the establishment of Campbell University School of Law.
After assembling a first-year faculty and ascertaining that we would be able to open in the fall of 1976, a year ahead of schedule, I thought of Beverly. Joy and I had married as college students and saved a year when I spent my senior undergraduate year in law school in a combined degree program. I inquired whether Beverly and Ben might be interested in pursuing a similar course. She took the LSAT and ended up with Ivy League credentials, matriculating in the Charter Class as one of our initial Campbell Scholars.

The rest is history. Much of it is set forth elsewhere in this memorial newsletter, and Stanley McQuade captured the essence of Beverly as a student in his elegant eulogy at her funeral:

... I remember her coming to my first class that I taught in Campbell, Advanced Jurisprudence. She was already herself well advanced in pregnancy with her first baby. Lara Bell was thus introduced to that important subject at a very early age. She later took two other elective courses with me. As teachers and students we endure and put up with one another a good deal of the time. But once in a while, rarely indeed, a student comes along who is a delight to the teachers and pulls the best out of them. Beverly was one of these, always prepared, always interested, always excited about learning. I knew then that we had an unusual talent with us.

While preparing to give birth to Lara she fashioned a full-time/part-time schedule for her studies that closely resembles what many law firms are doing today to accommodate high-achieving lawyer-mothers. She took four years to graduate, and in the third and fourth years she took and audited enrichment courses beyond those required for graduation.

She also served as a teaching assistant in both advocacy and substantive courses those two years, and her performance so delighted her future colleagues that there was no doubt that they would someday ask her to return to Campbell as a faculty member. They did, she came, and she taught. She taught more different classes than any faculty member in the history of Campbell, and she taught them all well.

The purpose of this paper is not to make her life meaningful. She did that in the way she lived. The meaningfulness of her life has been and continues to be evidenced by her relationships and the lives she touched: her family, over a thousand students, her colleagues, her brothers and sisters at the bar, her broad array of friends; by the poignant recollections of students at her memorial service in Buies Creek; by the congregation of hundreds of mourners at the funeral home and at Zebulon Baptist Church, an outpouring of people greater than any I recall in almost a half-century of attending funerals of people loved well and broadly in that community; by the substance of an educational program and approach she helped fashion as student and teacher; and by the moistness of eye and tightness of throat that we still experience when we gather and speak of her. Her life was meaningful. Where we seek meaning is in her death. To quote again from Stanley's eulogy:

... we do not really understand what happened. We probably never will really. But I have thought about it, we all have. None of us, and she least of all, willingly harm ourselves or those we love. But we know a little more than we used to about the chemistry of the body and how it can dim the candle of the soul.

Yes, we now know of some of these things, and even seek to incorporate much of this knowledge into our curriculum: models of stressors and ways to mitigate and eliminate them; trends in and outside the profession that are changing the culture of lawyering in ways we do not like; the patterns of career paths and the hard lessons of experience top achievers must learn; societal norms that often condition opportunities for female lawyers on a narrow band of acceptable behavior that is neither too feminine nor too masculine, and still require that they continue to bear primary responsibility for maintaining the household and their family relationships; and overcommitment that robs life of balance, spreads talent too thin, and limits our access to our own intelligence and inhibits creative thought.

Ultimately, many of us ask ourselves, as we must, to what extent our falling short of our aspirations as individuals, as a School, and as a University contributed to or failed to prevent Beverly's death. This we will never know, as we will never know if, as we suspect, Beverly's actions were a cry for help - a cry to us. What we do know is something else Stanley told us at Beverly's funeral:

... whatever was happening on last Thursday evening, as I think about it, my heart and my hand, and your heart and your hand, instinctively go out to her. And the heart that governs the Universe is no more unfeeling than yours and mine, infinitely wiser and better I know, but not harder.

The heart that governs the Universe goes out to us also. It knows - wills even, I think - that we seek meaning, and that we learn, primarily from our own mistakes and the mistakes of others, and that in learning we both discover and create meaning. Which is what we are doing with the life of Beverly Wheeler Massey and will do with our lives and with the life of Campbell University School of Law.
TRIAL TEAM NAMED REGIONAL CHAMPS

Two of our trial teams had outstanding performances in the Southeast Regional Trial Competition of the National Trial Competition on February 1. One team captured the regional championship and the other team placed third. The championship team will go on to the national finals in Houston, Texas.

Campbell was one of only two law schools to advance both of its teams to the semi-final round, and Campbell was the only law school to have both teams compete in the final round. Being the smallest law school in the region has certainly not inhibited the performance of our teams. They were 1986 and 1988 regional champs!

The Southeast Regional was held in Jackson, Mississippi, and included 17 law school teams from a five-state area: North Carolina, South Carolina, Tennessee, Mississippi and Arkansas. The competition is sponsored by the American Bar Association, The American College of Trial Lawyers, and the Texas Young Lawyers Association.

Members of the winning trial were Johnny C. Chriscoe, Jr. of Angier, Thomas Walker of Waynesville, and Francina Muse of Laurinburg. Members of the third place team were Wallace Bradsher of Butner, Susan Robbins of Charlotte, and Jill Westmoreland of Hendersonville.

CAMPBELL MOOT COURT COMPETITION WINS CHAMPIONSHIP ROUND

The Campbell Moot Court Competition was held here February 19-23. The two teams participating in the final round were Steve Stroud and David Mills against Darci Judkins and Jay White.

The team of Stroud and Mills was announced as the winning team in the championship round, receiving the highest score and "Best Brief" for their formal written brief. Stroud was ranked first, overall, in the entire competition and awarded the coveted Rick Edmundson Memorial Award for "Best Oralist."

The teams performed in the championship round to a panel of distinguished N.C. judges composed of Judge Willis Whichard, Associate Justice, N.C. Supreme Court; Sidney Eagles, Judge, N.C. Court of Appeals; and Franklin Dupree, Jr., Judge, U.S. District Court.

The top ten competitors will represent Campbell in National and Regional Moot Court Competition in the fall of 1991.
ABA MOOT COURT TEAM WINS REGIONAL COMPETITION

Two teams from Campbell competed in the ABA National Appellate Advocacy Regionals, March 30 and 31, at the University of Baltimore:

First Team: Cary Homes, Darci Judkins, and Chris Mewborn
Second Team: Lisa Miles, June Hobby, and Robert Buzzard

Both teams won preliminary rounds and advanced to the quarter finals. The team of Homes, Judkins, and Mewborn took first place and will compete in the National finals at the ABA Annual Meeting in Chicago in August.

ABA CLIENT COUNSELING PLACES 5TH IN NATION

The Client Counseling Team made up of first year students Terry Sholar and Pat Cook won regional competition in Baltimore and went on to the National Finals in St. Petersburg, Florida in March, where they placed 5TH IN THE NATION! This outstanding duo was coached by second year student Steve Stroud and advisor Rick Lord.

POLSKY COMPETITION

The Polsky Competition, held at Temple University in Philadelphia, was attended by three outstanding second year students from Campbell: Lisa Miles, Kim Smith, and Juanita Hart. This was Campbell's first year to compete in the Polsky Competition, which focuses on issues of criminal procedure. The next competition is scheduled for spring of '91.

BUILDING FUND UPDATE

General Info: We are still working hard to raise the $4 million for the 45,000 square foot addition to the Law School. This much needed addition will meet the growing needs of the Law School as well as the accreditation requirements of the American Bar Association.

Kresge Challenge Grant Issued! The Kresge Foundation has recently issued a challenge grant of $350,000 to be used in the construction of the new addition. In order to receive this grant we must raise our goal balance of $1.1 million on or before December 15, 1990.

Challenge - Response Giving Plans Expanded: If we are to meet the Kresge Challenge we must be willing to "go that extra mile" of giving. To give broader recognition for these extraordinary efforts, our giving plans have been expanded to three groups:

Circle donors of $10,000 or more
Sponsor donors of $5,000 to $9,999
Patron donors of $1,000 to $4,999.

Operation Homestretch Launched: In order to insur that we reach our balance goal of $1.1 million by December 15, 1990, "Operation Homestretch" has been launched. During the next six months every effort will be made to personally present each past and prospective donor with the opportunity to become a donor or increase their present plan.
CLASS OF 1980: 10-YEAR REUNION

The Class of 1980 gathered in Buies Creek and in Raleigh on April 28, for the 10 year reunion. The day started with golf at Keith Hills, Tim Fuhrman and Bruce Lacey having the best day on the course. The evening activities began with an elegant reception sponsored by Hunter Wyche at his Raleigh firm Smith, Debnam, Hibbert & Pahl. The reunion banquet was held at the Velvet Cloak Inn and a great time was had by all as we reminisced with pictures from the past. Professor Broderick gave the invocation before dinner with remarks from Dean Hetrick, Professor Jenkins, and Founding Dean Davis after the dinner hour.

The Class of 1990 hasn't changed a bit!

- Questioning David Swanson's credibility.
- Enjoying dinner together - just like Marshbanks?
- Some people were not born with a silver spoon in their mouth!
- Remembering law school with more humor than they lived it!
The Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law at Campbell University held its twelfth annual recognition ceremony Sunday May 6, 1990.

After opening remarks by Dean Patrick Hetrick, the invocation was given by Dr. Larry D. Wilkinson, father of graduating law student, Dale Ann Wilkinson.

The president of Campbell University, Norman A. Wiggins, welcomed everyone to the ceremony and extended a special welcome to last year’s keynote speaker, Ken Burns, who was also in attendance.

Dean Hetrick then introduced this year’s keynote speaker, George B. Mast, President Elect of the North Carolina Bar Association.

In his speech, Mast welcomed the graduating law students to the legal profession. He asked them to consider five goals toward a happy life. According to Mast, they should know themselves, be honest with themselves and with others, stand tall in the face of adversity, and always be persistent.

An awards presentation followed the keynote address. A complete list of the winners will be included in this issue.

After the presentation of the awards the class of 1990 received their hoods from law professor Robert A. Jenkins.

The ceremony ended with the benediction given by Dr. J. Stanley McQuade.

For the students, the day was best summed up by Dean Hetrick in his opening remark "For all you do, this hood's for you."

THE DEAN'S CORNER by Patrick K. Hetrick

"Where there is sorrow there is holy ground." — Oscar Wilde

This special edition of The Campbell Lawyer is dedicated to the memory of our friend and colleague, Bev Massey. We have felt and continue to feel a great sense of grief and loss because of Bev’s death. In publishing this special edition, it is our intention to record some of the many positive things that Beverly Massey did and the many happy moments that she shared with all of us.

Large numbers of you paid a personal tribute to Bev at the funeral service and the memorial service. Your support of her family, your prayers and offers of help have been much appreciated.

The Women-In-Law Organization voted to rename their scholarship fund "The Beverly Wheeler Massey Memorial Women-In-Law Scholarship Fund." Through the efforts of Women-In-Law and thanks to donations made in Bev’s honor, including the initial donation from her daughter, Lara, we hope to commence awarding scholarships from this fund in the upcoming academic year. The Placement Center at the School of Law will also be named in honor of Bev. Anyone desiring to designate their building fund donation or pledge for that purpose can do so by simply notifying me.

It has been said that life is not necessarily made up of great sacrifices or duties; rather, it consists of little things — a smile, an open door, a phone call, a kind word, a small favor. To paraphrase Wordsworth, the best part of a good life consists of "...little, nameless, unremembered acts of kindness and love." Bev Massey’s efforts here as student and then professor and dean were consistently focused on making others happy. She radiated sunshine, lifted others above herself, and I’ll always remember her for those qualities.

Class Notes

Class of 1981

Rick Harper made the news when he won a condemnation award of $1,124,948 for a Caldwell County quarry owner, a record in the western county. Rick used a variety of opinion witnesses on the issue of value in the three-day jury trial. The award was five-and-a-half times the amount the State deposited with the clerk of court as its estimate of compensation for the property taken by routing a highway across the property. One of Rick's co-counsel in the case was Jay Coward ('84), "without whom the record verdict could not have been obtained," according to Rick. As a result of the experience of working with Jay and his partner, Orville D. Coward, on the case, Rick decided to move from Apex to the mountains, to become associated with Jay's firm of Coward, Cabler, Sossomon, Hicks & Beck, P.A., in the firm's Sylva office. According to Rick, he will be realizing "a lifelong dream to live and work in the mountains of North Carolina."

Robert Winfrey has been accepted at the Harvard Divinity School.

Class of 1982

David V. Williams now serves as 21st Circuit Court Judge. The 21st Judicial District comprises Martinsville, Henry County and Patrick County.

Class of 1983

Wyatt Hanna and his brother, Sam ('84), have formed a partnership, Hanna & Hanna, 1510 Kanawha Blvd. East, Charleston, WV 25311, (304) 342-2137. Wyatt formerly served as an Assistant Attorney General for the State of West Virginia. He and his wife, Terri, now have three daughters: Emily (age 3), Lindsey (age 1), and Elizabeth (age 8 mo.).

Sheila McLamb, who is still practicing in Shallotte, NC, as a partner in the firm of Anderson & McLamb, sends greetings to her classmates. Sheila invites you to drop in and say "hello" if you are visiting her area of the North Carolina coast. Her office address is One Pine Street.

Phil Summa married Mary Potter ('84) September 9 at Charlotte. Phil practices with the Charlotte law firm of Bell, Seltzer, Park and Gibson, PA.

Class of 1984

Elaine Cohoon and George Miller ('86) were married in April. Elaine does insurance defense litigation with Golding, Meekins, Holden, Cosper & Stiles in Charlotte, specializing in medical malpractice.

Jay Coward and Monty Beck are partners in the firm of Coward, Sossomon, Hicks & Beck, P.A., with offices in Sylva, Franklin, Cashiers, and Highlands, NC. Rick Harper ('81) is now associated with the firm in the Sylva office.

Sam Hanna and his brother, Wyatt (83), have formed a partnership, Hanna & Hanna, 1510 Kanawha Blvd. East, Charleston, WV 25311, (304) 342-2137. Sam and his wife, Cynthia, have a daughter, Samantha (age 2), and are expecting their second child in May.

Lu Pendleton Hayes of Van Camp, West, Webb & Hayes in Pinehurst has been certified by the North Carolina State Bar Board of Legal Specialization as a Residential Real Property Specialist. Penny and her husband, Ed Whalen, are expecting a new baby in the spring. Older brothers Carson and Tommy are excited.

Tommy Nichols has opened an office for the general practice of law in the Jones Building, at 208 E. Franklin Street, Rockingham, NC. Tommy also serves as guardian ad litem for Richmond County, chairman of the advisory board of the Richmond Rescue Squad, and chairman of the Board of Trustees of Zion Methodist Church.

Editor's Comment:

Here ends the first newsletter that includes my editorial efforts. This newsletter, numbered 1 & 2 of Volume 2, follows the December 1989 issue as there was no issue published in March.

We are glad to receive information from you for the newsletter. Please use the form on page 10 to submit news and articles for print.

I look forward to hearing from you.

"You passed exams, but you're not passing inspection, Ben."

"KC, on what page is that quote?"

"Is that alphabetical order..."

"This mike's for me and this hood's for you!"
by first name or last name?"

"I pledged...how 'bout you?"

John Barrow looks over his class one more time.

"The Happy Hooder"

CAMPBELL CAN HELP YOU WITH YOUR PLACEMENT NEEDS

You are invited to participate in Campbell’s Law School Placement Program

To arrange on-campus interviews, contact the Placement Office as early as possible in advance of the planned visit. We are arranging Fall 1990 on-campus interviews now, but interviews may be scheduled at any time during the year. The Placement Office will be happy to collect resumes, arrange interview schedules, reserve conference rooms, and make all other necessary accommodations.

Employers not visiting the School of Law are invited to list positions with the Placement Office and to forward job information material which will be distributed to alumni and students.
