HOODING CEREMONY HELD AT CAMPBELL

Sporadic afternoon showers and a crowded Turner auditorium did not dampen the enthusiasm pouring from the 98 members of Campbell University Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law's graduating class of 1995. The traditional hooding ceremony took place on Sunday, May 15th. Kathryn Downing, Chief Executive Officer of Lawyers Cooperative Publishing, delivered the address to the class members and to their families and friends in attendance.

Ms. Downing began by recommending that the class members adopt her practice of observing other professionals. "By watching those around us, those we admire and those we don't, we will be able to define and redefine our concept of the successful professional." She noted that over the last twenty years of making such observations, she has identified four qualities shared by those whom she considered to be successful.

"First and most important," she stated, "successful people are always in touch with and responsive to their customers." Ms. Downing challenged the class to view problems from the perspective of the client, and to find joy in filling their needs, because the commitment to providing for clients will lead to success and realization of financial goals. She cited a study of small businesses which showed that businesses motivated by a mission to serve their clients were financially more successful than businesses motivated by profit.

The second quality shared by the successful is a commitment to continuous self-improvement. "Practicing self-improvement," she stated, "means never being satisfied with the status quo. It means not only fixing problem spots, but also improving processes that seem to work just fine, and perfecting the areas of our practice that are already outstanding." Ms. Downing advised the class that a lawyer who wants to improve is always aiming to learn more and achieve more. "Law school," she stated, "is a starting point rather than an ending point in learning."

Ms. Downing told the class that solo and small firm attorneys are somewhat disadvantaged when compared to corporate professionals in that they do not receive management feedback to assist them in correcting their weaknesses. To fill this void, she suggested that attorneys in such practices should seek feedback from those around them, such as colleagues, opposing counsel, clients, jurors, family and friends. "It is only with honest and candid observations of how you impact individuals, how you influence, how you handle situations, that you can improve," she said.

The third quality of the successful, according to Ms. Downing, is passion. She told the class that successful people are happy, energetic and grateful to be alive. They approach every day with the understanding that life is not a dress rehearsal; no wasted moment can be recaptured. Providing a note of encouragement, Ms. Downing stated that successful people really have fun. "Their focus is not singular. They are also dedicated to their families, their communities and their friends."

Completing the list of qualities shared by those who have enjoyed success, Ms. Downing stated that successful people have "good luck and great timing." To the delight of the class, she stated that this is an outstanding time to be graduating from law school because the legal landscape is changing. She explained that new technology, client demands and business pressures are forcing a change in the legal field, not unlike the revitalization of a business, that is fundamental to its survival. Lawyers today have an opportunity to be a factor in the "overhaul." Ms. Downing told the members of the class that they could "make a difference in the way law is practiced and the way lawyers are viewed."

Ms. Downing concluded with the wish that, in pursuit of their dreams, the Class of 1995 would make the world a better place.

TWO LAW FACULTY PROFESSORS HONORED

Founding Dean and Law Professor F. Leary Davis is shown receiving his award from Carol Phillips who is from the firm of Sedley & Austin in Los Angeles, CA.

Founding Dean and Professor F. Leary Davis and Professor Richard T. Rodgers were honored recently by being inducted into the second class of Honorary Fellows and Fellows by the College of Law Practice Management, a non-profit corporation formed in 1993. The presentation on April 22 at The Jefferson Hotel in Washington, D.C., followed a full day's educational experience on the theme, "The Global Practice of Law Begins at Home."

Those inducted were nominated and elected unanimously by the Trustees of the College after an extensive nomination process. Richard C. Reed of Bellevue, Washington, president of the College, stated, "The Purposes of the College are to recognize leaders in the legal profession who have made outstanding contributions to law firm management over a period of not less than ten years, and to stimulate thought on future developments and techniques of practice management." The College has 77 Fellows from the United States, England and Canada. Davis and Rodgers are the only law professors represented in the College.

LONDON CONSULTATION EXPLORES RELIGIOUS LIBERTY AND MUSLIM-CHRISTIAN DIALOGUE

Lynn Buzzard, professor of constitutional and international law, and Director of the Church-State Resource Center, was a key participant in a London Consultation, July 2-5. The consultation drew academicians, religious leaders and advocacy groups from both western nations and several third world countries to focus on religious liberty issues, especially as they arise in predominately Muslim states.

The Consultation, called by the International Institute for the Study of Islam and Christianity (IISIC) based in London, was triggered both by a current ongoing series of consultations involving the World Council of Churches and Muslim leaders, and by growing concerns about trends and developments in culturally Muslim areas. IISIC is a leader in monitoring developments in Muslim-Christian dialogue, and is a valuable resource for Christian groups and persons working in these areas. IISIC also publishes a country by country report on the situation of churches and religious liberty in many of these countries.

Three types of situations dominated the London discussions. First, states dominated by Muslim fundamentalists where religious law is increasingly the civil law — e.g. Iran. In such states, non-Muslim become legally second class citizens, and substantial problems develop for all non-Muslim religious communities. Many branches of Muslim thought refuse, in fact, to even affirm the concept of religious liberty.

Second, Muslim areas with more moderate governments such as Egypt but where more radical groups are putting pressure on the government sometimes even engaging in terrorist activities. In such states, non-Muslim religious communities may also experience pressure from these extreme elements. Though it has received little publicity, the fact is that substantial violence has been carried out against Christian communities, properties and leaders in many of these countries.

Third, those areas which are similar to developments in the Balkans where religious and ethnic identities merge and the tendency is for the whole region to develop into a religious war. Serious tasks of widespread religious war exist in the horn of Africa.

The consultation was an attempt to explore these problems and provide some bases for seeking a more effective dialogue between Christian and Muslim leaders — to explore the religious bases for the protection of religious human rights, and to address specific problems. Professor Buzzard played the lead role in a draft statement issued by the Consultation which is being distributed to Christian leaders throughout the west and those working in culturally Muslim areas. The Declaration seeks to identify the bases for dialogue by identifying certain common commitments but also identifying the areas of "grave concern." (Copies may be obtained from the Church-State Resource Center at Campbell.)

Buzzard noted of particular concern is the increasing emphasis on "apostasy" laws in some Muslim-dominated states. Such laws prohibit and severely punish "conversion." It is against the civil law in many such states to change religions — and even to attempt to "proselytize" a Muslim. In fact, Buzzard noted that Muslim dominated states have generally declined to sign international human rights documents which have affirmed the human right not only to practice religion but to adopt and change a religion. In a Muslim cultural and too often legal context, such rights are rejected. While at least nominally one may have a religion of their choice, it is not permissible to change it — at least not if you were born into a Muslim family.

Buzzard noted that Muslim theology also declared that all non-Muslims are in a dhimmi status — a sort of second class citizenship so that certain civil and legal rights are available only to Muslims. Marriage laws, property rights, inheritance rights are some of the areas where there is formal civil legal discrimination.

Christian communities in these Muslim-dominated political states are often at considerable risk, so much so that even when grave violations of rights occur there is a reluctance to complain publicly because of the tendency for such a complaint to only intensify the problems.

The London Consultation's process will continue at a major conference to be held in Addis Ababa in December. There, major Christian groups with work in Africa and Muslim areas will meet to discuss a variety of opportunities and issues. Professor Buzzard has been asked to chair a task force devoted to issues of religious liberty. The track will include experts from throughout the west and third world countries.

LAW PROFESSOR TRAINS NEW "STUDENTS"

Professor Richard Rodgers helped the law school make national news when he was quoted in the June 21st edition of The Kansas City Star. Professor Rodgers was attending a week long workshop on oxen-handling.

"I figured if I can train a lawyer I should be able to train an ox," said North Carolina law professor Richard Rodgers. "I'm not so certain of that now."

Professor Rodgers plans to train and has already purchased three young steers. The Rodgers open their farm to school groups and others interested in learning about animals.

We will keep a watchful eye on Professor Rodgers and his classroom teaching techniques this Fall now that we know that "Gee, means go right and "Haw" means go left in oxen terms!

David L. Dickson, 89, who taught at Campbell Law School from the Fall of 1977 to the Fall of 1982, passed away from an apparent heart attack on April 11, 1995 in St. Petersburg, FL. His survivors include his wife of 65 years, Dorothy; a daughter, Joyce Hren, Raleigh, NC; a son, David, San Diego, CA; five grandchildren; and three great-grandchildren.

Donna Simmons will be leaving the law school staff in August to join her husband, Taft who has accepted a banking position in Johnson City, TN. Taft is a 1995 Campbell University graduate, having majored in Trust Management. Donna served for four years as the Administrative Assistant for the Religious Freedom Reporter and Professor Lynn Buzzard. Donna will be missed by everyone in the law school, but we are all very happy for Donna, Taft and 4 year old daughter Tara as they begin a new chapter in their lives. Best of Luck!

We would like to welcome Julie Hunter Bascom to the Law School family. She began her position as Technical Services Librarian on April 17.

Julie is from Hattiesburg, Mississippi. She received her Bachelor of Arts and Master of Library Science degrees from University of Southern Mississippi. As well as working as a cataloger in Alabama, she has been a children’s librarian in Georgia and Fayetteville, NC. Julie has also held the title of branch manager with Muscogee County Public Library System, Georgia.

Julie’s hobbies include cooking and traditional storytelling. She tells folk and southern tales and ghost stories to educational, civic and church groups. She also enjoys tandem storytelling. Now that she has returned to the Fayetteville area, she hopes to join her storytelling partner and renew their interest in tandem storytelling.

Mrs. Bascom’s pet rat terrier also requires a great deal of her time. She and Buster enjoy daily walks and watching jeopardy. Paul, Mrs. Bascom’s husband, is a First Sergeant in the US Army and will soon be assigned to the 82nd Airborne at Fort Bragg.

Associate Dean Johnny Chriscoe and Assistant Dean Jim Bailey helped sponsor a breakfast on June 14 in Myrtle Beach, SC at the North Carolina Academy of Trial Lawyers Conference. More than a handful of Campbell Alumni/ae attended.

Founding Dean and Professor F. Leary Davis (host), Associate Dean Johnny Chriscoe and Assistant Dean Jim Bailey attended the Annual NC Bar Association Conference on June 16 in Asheville, NC. A luncheon was held for Campbell Alumni/ae and their spouses who were able to attend the conference. Approximately forty individuals were in attendance for the luncheon.

NEW ASSOCIATE DEAN NAMED

Johnny C. Chriscoe, Jr. has joined the law school as Associate Dean of Placement and External Affairs. The position is designed to bring together as one department the functions of placement and alumni relations.

"Our goal in placement and external relations is to spread the good word about Campbell's outstanding law graduates and mission to our various publics," stated Patrick K. Hetrick, Dean of the law school. "I'm delighted that someone as talented as Johnny Chriscoe has agreed to join and lead Campbell's already strong placement and alumni relations team."

Chriscoe is a 1990 graduate of Campbell's Norman Adrian Wiggins School of Law. Upon graduation, Chriscoe served for one year as a research assistant to Judge K. Edward Greene at the North Carolina Court of appeals. He has since been engaged in the private practice of law.

Chriscoe received his Bachelor of Arts degree from Pembroke State University in 1980. Prior to attending law school he was employed in industry as and industrial engineer. Formerly of Scotland County, he and his family have resided in Harnett County since 1986. He is married to the former Susan Wells of Angier and they have two children, Ryan and Virginia. ALUMNI PARTICIPATE IN THE PITT CO. MED-LAW CLASSIC

Wayne Hardee (L'82) and wife, Donna served as Co-Chairs for the 1995 MED-LAW Basketball Classic sponsored by the Pitt County Bar Association and Medical Association. Although we do not know the final outcome for the games that were played, we are pleased to have had so much Campbell representation on the rosters. The Female Litigator Team consisted of alumnae Hope Adams (L'92), Tina Fisher (L'94), and Cindy Mills (L'88). The Male Litigator Team had great Campbell representation from Darren Dawson (L'92), John Dunn (L'89), Jeff Foster (L'90), Jimmy Nelson (L'80), Mike Rizzi (L'94), Les Robinson (L'86), Wade Stanley (L'90) and Bill Wolfe (L'94). The Only brave Campbell alum to participate on the Litigator “Sweet Thang” Cheerleading squad was Robert Jones (L'89).

NC BAR FOUNDATION CLE FEATURES CAMPBELL LAW GRADUATES

The North Carolina Bar will host a 1995 Practical Skills Course August 28-31. We are proud to report that nine presenters are Campbell Law Alumni/ae: James “Buddy” Allard, Jr. (L'85), Earl T. Brown (L'91), Marcelina K. Crisco (L'92), Joel R. Ledbetter (L'94), Mary McHugh (L'92), Phillip A. Mullins (L'93), Debra Kay Price (L'93), Hoyt G. Tessener (L'88) and Stephen P. Watkins (L'93). It is our understanding that this course assists young attorneys in making the transition from law school to law practice.

On June 3, 1995, the Class of 1985 held its tenth year reunion. In all honesty, item 4 above did not really occur with this group. One gets the feeling that this class spends considerably less time tearfully recalling the past than living the moment and thriving on the future. These folks do have fun. Speaking of which, items 1-3 did occur. Item 1 involved practically every member of the class, either as the antagonist or the victim. In item 2, the district court judges were the Honorable Robert Rader and the Honorable Robert Stiehl, both members of the Class of 1985. Item 3, of course, involved the Honorable Sidney S. Eagles of the North Carolina Court of Appeals. The verbal barbs directed at Judge Eagles were reflective of the fact that Judge Eagles was as much a part of a Campbell law student’s education in 1985 as he is in 1995.

The reunion was held at the Capital City Club in Raleigh, and began with a reception sponsored by Commonwealth Land Title of North Carolina, and arranged by Kaye Duncan Baggett. Ms. Baggett has confessed to being married to Tal Baggett, President of the Class of 1985.

After the reception, the Class progressed, rather slowly, from the reception room to the dinner, some uttering something about the view being better in the reception room. Dinner consisted of chicken something or the other, vegetables and salad, which, of course, also consisted of vegetables. Actually, the meal was top notch with numerous compliments (especially regarding the 1000 calorie per wiff cheesecake).

After dinner, Tal Baggett opened the program with some truly inspirational words which no one seemed to remember by the end of the evening. Tal was followed by Dean Hetrick who gave a poignant and equally memorable address. The Class members were then called upon to stand up (naturally, there being law professors present), and tell a little (or less) about what they had been up to the past ten years. All became meditative as Isaac Cortes stated in inspiration here, they had the place rolling in laughter. Overheard, by the way, was this conversation. “He looks so good for his age,” stated one Class member. “That’s not really The Chief,” said another Class member. “Oh, I know,” stated the first. “I was talking about Geoff.” The Chief was portrayed, sometimes rather convincingly, by Mark Edmondson. Geoff Hulse portrayed himself, also sometimes rather convincingly. Class members and faculty alike were honored by the attendance of Professor and Ms. Braun, who traveled from their home in Virginia to be a part of this reunion.

Congratulations to the Class of 1985. Including faculty, family and friends, there were approximately 100 in attendance, making this reunion one of the largest in Campbell law history.

When last seen, the Class of 1985 was exiting the Capital City Club toward downtown Raleigh, which was on the opposite side of the building from where the cars were parked. For our records, we ask that Mr. Baggett notify us when the reunion officially ends.

Jerry Collins has become a partner in the new firm of Collins, Blomeley & Woody (Merinda Swanson Woody is a 1983 graduate of the law school). The address is 123 Peachtree Street, Murphy, NC 28906; (704)837-9456.

Charles A. Jones attended the fiftieth anniversary commemoration on Iwo Jima on March 14, 1995. He states that his visit was prompted by his love of military history, his service in the Marine Corps, and the fact that his father's B-29 bomber landed on Iwo Jima twice during 1945. Charles attended the American-Japanese ceremony and toured the Japanese hospital and headquarters caves, but was initially denied access to Mount Suribachi, the site of the famous flag raising. In response to the complaints of the veterans in attendance, the Commandant of the Marine Corps intervened and the veterans and Charles were allowed to visit the top of historic Mount Suribachi.

We regret to inform the Class of 1985 that all pictures taken at the Class of 1985 Tenth Year Reunion could not be developed. It seems that the rolls of film were all exposed while in the University dark room and, consequently, ruined. No one is more disappointed than our staff. We had so looked forward to devoting a large portion of this newsletter to the reunion. But, unfortunately, all that we can provide you with now is an evening full of memories. All efforts are being made to refund those of you who had pre-paid to have a class picture sent to you. If you have not heard from us, please let us know! S-O-R-R-Y!

Geraldine Spates reports that she is feeling better after receiving Alternative Treatment in Aberdeen, NC. Gerry sent the following letter to Dean Hetrick and with her permission, we would like to share that letter with our readers:

July 14, 1995
Dear Dean Hetrick:

I have been remiss in not writing to you and the staff at the Law School to express my appreciation for the beautiful flowers that you sent to me several months ago. Thank you very much.

I also want to tell you how several alumnae came to my aid when I received the devastating news that my cancer had returned. Rebecca Britton (L'92) and Debbie Price (L'93) wrote letters to their respective classmates. Along with the Fayetteville, NC Bench and Bar they mounted a very successful fundraising campaign. It is in part because of their efforts and the response from so many caring alumni/ae that I was able to finance the alternative medical treatment that was not covered by my insurance. My cancer is not in total remission, but my condition is stable at this point. According to my oncologists, it is indeed a miracle that I am alive today. The Campbell graduates who came to my "rescue" deserve much of the credit for that miracle. I just thought you would like to know that Campbell graduates are more than just good lawyers, they are also good people.
Once again, thank you and the entire Law School staff for everything to include the flowers, cards, contributions and most of all your prayers.

Sincerely,
Geraldine O. Spates
